

1

contract/约(Yuē)

2 ~~Children's Lesson about God as Three in One – the Trinity Pyramid~~

Chinese Perspective ~~Title~~

ZHU Andong ~~Trinity Pyramid~~

17 Feb 2022

~~Learn about our trinity or triune God: 3 in 1~~

~~the 3 job titles = one whole~~

~~Several choices depending on how much time you are allowing for this activity.~~

~~About the words "Triune and Trinity" for pupils:~~

~~"The Trinity" usually means The Father, Son Jesus and Holy Spirit combined as God.~~

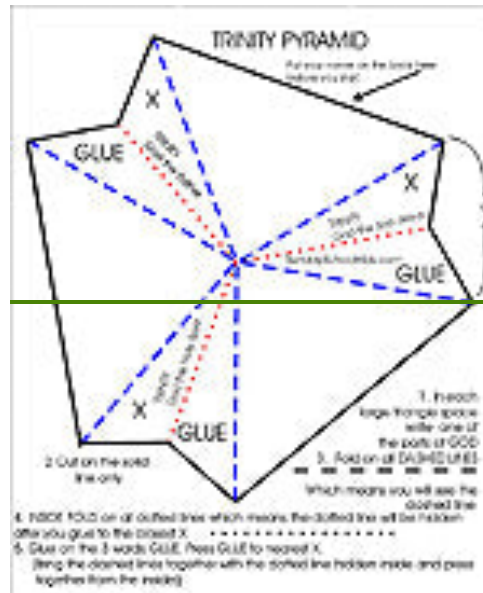

~~"Triune" is from latin combination three as one – or trinity. Triune is pronounced as try-yeen.~~

~~"Triune and Trinity" are pretty much special church words hardly ever used for other purposes.~~

~~Activity Information~~ ~~KS1 can do it~~ but their comprehension of what it is about will vary greatly you can use it as simply 3 names for GOD.
~~Teacher Information~~ Also applies to LKS2

(KS2)

Blank version
shown

MUM	DAD	GOD
Mother	Father	Father
(christian name)	(christian name)	Son
sister	brother	Jesus
Aunt (christian name)	Uncle (christian name)	Spirit
Mrs.or Ms.	Mr.	-
-	-	-

Triune God: 3 in 1 or 3 names based on the job.

We use a lot of different titles for the same person in our everyday lives and don't even think much about it. Depends on the "job" or the relationship of the other person (observer)

Have each student make a name chart identifying titles for just their mum and dad and see how many "names" you come up with. Here's a start with some possibilities. If a child comes from a one parent household and does not wish to include the absent parent, ask them to use a grandparent or other relative in that space

Father, Jesus and Spirit

 For many years, in some denominations, the "Spirit" was called "The Holy Ghost". If you use this name, you may prefer to make the totally blank pyramid. OR use the blank pyramid if you have any other special way you define the trinity such as:

Father, Son and Holy Ghost

~~Grade Level Span~~ EYFS and KS1 see note above
LKS2 can do the chart
UKS2 can do the pyramid

~~Category~~ Triune God

~~Materials~~

INSTANT ACTIVITY

— Copy of pyramid for each student

— Glue

— Scissors

— Markers or crayons

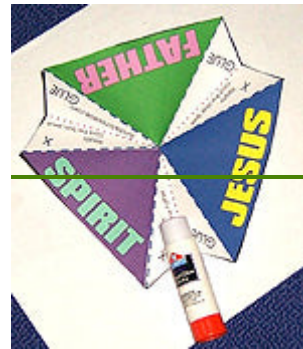

~~Preparation~~ Choose your pyramid and print enough for your class. Make one ahead of time to show. To colour the pyramid or not to colour?

~~Children's Instructions~~ 1. Colour your pyramid if you have chosen a pyramid to colour. If you have chosen the fully coloured version go to step 2.

2. Cut out the shape.

3. Fold on all dashed lines. Press and run your fingertips along the folds to sharpen the fold. The dotted lines should fall between the dashed lines, so just press together.

4. Make all the folds

5. Put glue where it says "Glue" (you can glue the entire area up to the coloured spaces for best results)

6. Press the glue together from the inside of the pyramid

约(Yue) is a polysemy in Chinese, and more than 20 meanings are listed in the Chinese Dictionary. According to Shuowen Jiezi, the original meaning of Yue is rope and entanglement. "Yue, entanglement". Later its meaning is extended to restraint and restriction. For example, Zhuangzi Pianmu reads "restraint without rope". Later, it gradually evolved into the meaning of an agreement similar to a contract in the west, that is, the conditions agreed jointly in oral or writing form. For example, Han Dynasty · Emperor Gaodi reads, "at the beginning of the year, the King Huai made an agreement with all generals that whoever to be the first to enter Guanzhong will be the king. " It can be seen that in Chinese, the meaning of Yue evolved from object (rope) to action and state (entanglement) between people and objects, and then evolved further to the relationship (agreement) between people (or individual and organization, organization and organization).

From its form, Yue can be categorized into written and unwritten ones. Generally speaking, written Yue is often more formal. From the perspective of different participants, Yue can be established between/among persons, between/among persons and organizations, and between/among organizations and organizations. It is conceivable that the proportion of unwritten agreements between/among persons will be higher than in other cases, but it is also common between individuals and 21 organizations and between organizations. For example, two companies agree to 22 negotiate something at a certain time and place. If the dimension of nation-state is 23 added, Yue can be categorized into domestic and transnational.

24 The content, negotiation process and implementation of a Yue is always under a certain 25 social, cultural and institutional environment, which requires the self-discipline of 26 participants, soft constraints of customs and social norms, and the mandatory
27 constraints of the rule of law system. In Chinese philosophy and culture, Yue is not
28 based on the abstract public will independent of the existence of the people, but relies
29 more on the cooperation between/among the participants, as well as people's constraints
30 on their own morality, so as to achieve social stability and harmony. For example,
31 Chinese Confucianism emphasizes people's conservation of self morality and true heart,
32 and the inspection and restraint of words and deeds, rather than focuses on facsimile
33 theory or metaphysics, and does not emphasize a super God like in Catholic philosophy.
34 Yan Hui once asked Confucius how to achieve "benevolence". Confucius replied: "self-
35 restraint and return to rites are benevolence. One day, the world belongs to benevolence.
36 It's up to others to be benevolent." (Analects of Confucius Yan Yuan). Neo 37 Confucianism emphasizes life Kung Fu and should always restrict and inspect oneself
38 and follow the principle of heaven. The principle of heaven here is not an abstract
39 concept, but more about daily use. Compared with the emphasis on contract and legal 40 power in western political thoughts such as social contract theory, Chinese emphasizes 41 individual cultivation, and the establishment and implementation of Yue is more based 42 on individual moral constraints.

43 In addition to individual moral constraints, rites, that is, social norms, also have an 44 important impact on the content, negotiation process and implementation of Yue.
45 Whether in the form or content, a Yue that is not in conformity with rites should not be 46 concluded, nor should it be implemented, and violations should not be punished, but 47 encouraged. On the contrary, the act of establishing a Yue that is not following rites
48 should itself be punished.

49 In Chinese culture, the punishment related to Yue can come from "heaven" (or God),
50 from social norms, or from law (written or unwritten). The latter is a coercive force
51 imposed by society or the state.

52 The God in ancient Chinese prose is also different from the God in the west. It is more
53 metaphorical in nature. In essence, In essence, it is a popular natural cosmology
54 dominated by reason and Qi. Therefore, for Chinese people, it is difficult to be linked 55 with the rights given by God, and the impersonal passivity in classical times is even 56 more difficult to be understood.

57 In the west, the basis of a contract is an oath, that is, a given right. Rousseau's famous 58 book on social contract says: "Since everyone gives himself to the whole, he does not
59 give himself to anyone; and since from any combiner, people can get the same rights
60 they have transferred to him, so people get the equivalent of everything they have lost 61 and greater power to preserve what they have." , which means that as long as the 62 protection given by the community to the individual according to the contract is

63 stronger than that given by the individual in the natural state, the initial agreement, 64 namely contract, is established. Rousseau also mentioned: "Whenever people think they 65 see that sovereignty is separate, they will make mistakes; and those powers that are 66 considered to be all parts of sovereignty are only subordinate to sovereignty and must 67 always be premised on the supreme will, and those powers are only the implementation
68 of the supreme will." "It can be seen that the general will is always just and always 69 based on the public interest; however, it can not be inferred that the people's 70 consideration will always be the same correct. People always want to be happy, but 71 people can't always see happiness clearly. People will never be corrupted, but people
72 are often deceived, and only at this time can people seem to be willing to be happy
73 Something with bad intentions. " "In order to find the best social rules suitable for all
74 nationalities, we need the highest wisdom that can insight into all human feelings
75 without being dominated by any feelings; it has nothing to do with our human nature, 76 but it can understand the depths of human nature; although its own happiness has 77 nothing to do with us, it is willing to care for our happiness; finally, in the current world
78 In the course of time, it takes into account the long-term glory, can work in this century
79 and enjoy in the next century. It simply needs gods to make laws for mankind. "
80 Rousseau's understanding of rights and contracts can be seen in the above paragraphs - 81 in Rousseau's theory, sovereignty can neither be transferred nor separated; law is the 82 embodiment of public will, obeying the law is obeying the people's own will, and 83 Rousseau especially emphasizes that social contracts are "given".

84 According to western thinking, in real society, the persistent tension between private 85 orders and government regulation exists in almost every field known by law.

86 Therefore, we have to think about whether the "contract" based on legal power is 87 absolutely feasible. Yue provided in Chinese ancient books are more about themselves, 88 emphasizing social morality than simple legal power and contract.