

The Law-Related Education Academy is facilitated by the Arizona Foundation for Legal Services & Education with funding made possible by the Arizona Department of Education School Safety Program.

“Promoting Respect and Responsible Behavior in Schools” Academy

Middle/High School

Sporting Events & Extracurricular Lesson Plan

Please obtain administrator approval prior to implementing this lesson.

Objectives:

- Students will understand the importance of following rules in after-school events
- Students will recognize the legal consequences of defiant behavior
- Students will collaboratively create informative posters that outline rules for a specific school event

Protective Factor Developed: Feelings of efficacy

Materials:

- ✓ Large poster paper and markers for each group
- ✓ Sticky Notes
- ✓ Dry erase dots labeled 1, 2, 3, and 4 (1 number for each student at each group)
- ✓ 4 posters labeled for the facilitator
- ✓ Giant foam dice
- ✓ Timing device for the facilitator

Prior to the lesson, Post four large posters at the front of the room, with the following titles:

Poster 1- After School Events

Poster 2- Personnel

Poster 3- Rules

Poster 4- Consequences

Timeframe: 40 Minutes

Team Teaching: For effective implementation of Law Related Education (LRE), team teach with the classroom teacher by...

- Having both the officer and teacher rotate among students and to different groups. Both instructors will provide positive feedback and engage in friendly conversations with students. This procedure will help reduce classroom disruptions, increase student engagement, and build supportive relationships with students.
- Encouraging classroom teachers to participate in all activities by injecting clarification statements by relating relevant content to their curriculum. In this method, students will see more connections to their student life and be willing to carry over concepts and skills learned in LRE.
- Assigning the classroom teacher part of the lesson instructions. Team teaching with the classroom teacher enables the students to further see the importance of LRE lessons. It also provides an opportunity for the classroom teacher to demonstrate teaching skills conducive to effective teaching. Student attention can be maintained more easily with different voices and personalities experienced throughout the lesson.

Lesson:

1. Divide the class into small groups of 3-4 students each. Provide each group with large poster paper, markers, sticky notes, and dry erase dots.
2. Pass out a dry erase dot to each student, small groups will determine who is #1,2,3, and 4 and then write the number on their dot to identify their role throughout the lesson.
3. Point out the 4 posters around the room. Instruct groups to brainstorm after school events and record 3 different events, one on each sticky note. Using the Dry erase dots #1 from each group will come up to the front of the room and place their 3 sticky notes on poster 1. The facilitator will read the events from poster 1 and group any repeats together.
4. Then instruct groups to record 3 different event personnel that would attend these events, one on each sticky note. Using the dry erase dots #2 from each group will come up to the front of the room and place their 3 sticky notes on poster 2. The facilitator will read event personnel from poster 2 and will relate to the events by matching each personnel with an event.
5. Then ask students what rules need to be implemented to ensure the event runs smoothly. Students will pick two events to write a rule for and record one on each sticky note. Using the dry erase dots #3 from each group will come up to the front of the room and place their 2 sticky notes on poster 3. The facilitator will read the rules posted on poster 3.
6. Next, ask them to write down a potential consequence for breaking the rules they recorded. Using the dry erase dots #4 from each group will come up to the front of the room and place their 2 sticky notes on poster 4. The facilitator will read the consequences. If the following broken rules are listed, make sure to inform the group of the legal consequences:
 - a. Fighting: Fight is considered assault, ARS 13-1203A1, a class one misdemeanor, consequences range from classes to fines to probation to jail time
 - b. Threats/Intimidation: ARS 13-1202A1, a class one misdemeanor, consequences range from classes to fines to probation to jail time
 - c. Harassment: ARS 13-2921, a class one misdemeanor, consequences range from no contact with target, to fines, to probation, to classes, to jail time
 - d. Trespassing: ARS 13-1502/1503/1504, depending on the location could range from class three misdemeanor to felony, consequences could include no contact, fines, probations, classes, to jail time. Trespassing can occur even if you are initially allowed at the event. If you are told to leave and refuse to do so, you could be considered trespassing
 - e. Weapon on campus: There are multiple possible legal consequences regarding this type of incident which range from fines to suspensions/revocation of license, probation, jail time.
 - f. Drugs on campus: Depending on the drug and how it is being used, sold, etc....consequences start with fines, suspension/revocation of license, mental health assistance, possibly probation
 - g. Vandalism: Viewed as criminal damage, ARS 13-1602, misdemeanor up to felony depending on amount of damage, consequences range from paying for damage, to fines, suspension of license, to probation, to anger management classes
7. Next, each group will create a poster on an event. As a group they will choose one event to focus on. The facilitator will roll the giant foam dice to see which table will choose their event first. No events can be repeated once selected. Facilitator will continue to roll the dice until all groups have chosen an event.

8. Explain that they will be creating posters that highlight the rules of the event, how the rule creates safety, and the school and legal consequences for breaking the rule.
9. Each poster should include:
 - a. A clear title (e.g., "Rules for the School Dance")
 - b. A list of rules
 - c. The safety reason for each rule
 - d. School and legal consequences for not following the rules
 - e. Visual elements (drawings, charts) to enhance their message
10. All group members will participate and contribute ideas to the poster. They will have 12 minutes to complete the poster. #1's will start writing and once the 3-minute timer is up, they will pass the marker to #2. This will continue every 3 minutes until the 12 minutes is up and all group members have contributed.
11. Gallery Walk: Display the posters around the classroom. Allow students to walk around and review each poster.
12. Lead a discussion on what they learned from the activity. Ask questions like:
 - a. Which rules do you think are most important, and why?
 - b. How can we support each other in following these rules?
13. Roll the dice once to determine what table and another time to determine what # at that table will answer.
14. Debrief the lesson by asking each student to write down on a sticky note one new rule or behavior they will commit to following at the next school event. Collect sticky notes.

The Law-Related Education Academy is facilitated by the Arizona Foundation for Legal Services & Education with funding made possible by the Arizona Department of Education School Safety Program.

“Promoting Respect” Academy

(Middle/High School)

“Sporting Events & Extra Curricular” Lesson Plan

Arizona State Standards Correlations

Civics

7-12 S3C4 PO4b-c Explain the obligations and responsibilities of citizenship: obeying the law.

8.C2.2 Explain specific roles, rights, and responsibilities of people in a society.

HS.C2.4 Analyze the responsibility of citizens.

Speaking and Listening:

SL.1 Prepare for and participate effectively in a range of conversations and collaborations with diverse partners, building on others’ ideas and expressing their own clearly and persuasively.

SL.2 Integrate and evaluate information presented in diverse media and formats, including visually, quantitatively, and orally.

SL.4 Present information, findings, and supporting evidence such that listeners can follow the line of reasoning, and the organization, development, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience.

You are about to participate in a group-based oral presentation. This presentation will be assessed and will contribute 20% toward your grade. Your overall score for this assessment will be determined partly by the performance of your group and partly by the performance of yourself as an individual. You are expected to talk as a group and engage the audience for 30 minutes, and the audience will remain silent during this time. At the conclusion of your presentation, your group will facilitate a short tutorial discussion with your classmates. Good luck with all parts of the assessment.

Previously, we obtained data to indicate that many students become nervous prior to and during their presentation. As a consequence, we wanted to do something to help students manage their worries. Below (in bold) are some common negative thoughts that people have about presentations and public speaking. Following each of these negative thoughts, we've provided some material that describes why each negative thought actually has little foundation. We hope (and think) that this information will help you to manage your feelings prior to your speech.

"Everyone will see that I'm nervous"

- This is a common concern, and researchers call it the illusion of transparency. Scientific evidence has proven that it is misguided to think that everyone can pick up on your nerves or anxiety.
- Research has consistently shown that audience members are much less likely to perceive public speakers' internal states (e.g., nervousness) than what the speakers think [1,2,3].
- No matter what you think, any intense feelings you might be experiencing (such as nerves) are displayed too subtly to be detected by others [3].
- Your nerves, if you have them, are not likely to be picked up by audience members—whether in this presentation, or in future talks you might give.

"Everyone is judging me and my appearance during my talk"

- This is another common thought, and researchers call it the spotlight effect. A lot of research indicates that people overestimate the extent to which others are actually attending to, and judging, their external appearance [4,5].
- This means that other people are not judging you and your appearance to the extent that you think they are.
- All of the audience members will present themselves at some point, and they are watching your presentation to learn about your group's work; they're not here with the goal of judging you.

"I'm not going to do well in my speech because I'm nervous"

- Researchers at some of the world's best universities—including Yale [6] and Harvard [7]—have shown that the effects of stress and anxiety are largely dependent on how the symptoms are interpreted.
- For instance, anxiety and excitement share very similar physical symptoms; what seems to be important is how you choose to interpret the symptoms [7]. What this means is that anxiety, if you experience it, is not necessarily a bad thing at all, and might even help you feel 'switched on' and ready.
- In support, the correlation between anxiety and speech performance among presenters in this class last year was 0.16, which is a very small relationship. The people who were highly nervous didn't do any worse in their presentation. Even if you feel anxious about your presentation, you don't need to think of this as a threat to how well you'll perform.

1. Behnke, R. R., Sawyer, C. R., & King, P. E. (1987). The communication of public speaking anxiety. Communication Education, 36, 138-141.
 2. Mansell, W., & Clark, D. M. (1999). How do I appear to others? Social anxiety and processing of the observable self. Behaviour Research and Therapy, 37, 419-434.
 3. Savitsky, K., & Gilovich, T. (2003). The illusion of transparency and the alleviation of speech anxiety. Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, 39, 618-625.
 4. Gilovich, T., Kruger, J., & Medvec, V. H. (2002). The spotlight effect revisited: Overestimating the manifest variability of our actions and appearance. Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, 38, 93-99.
 5. Gilovich, T., Medvec, V. H., & Savitsky, K. (2000). The spotlight effect in social judgment: An egocentric bias in estimates of the salience of one's own actions and appearance. Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, 78, 211-222.
 6. Crum, A. J., Salovey, P., & Achor, S. (2013). Rethinking stress: The role of mindsets in determining the stress response. Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, 104, 716-733.
 7. Brooks, A. W. (2014). Get excited: Reappraising pre-performance anxiety as excitement. Journal of Experimental Psychology: General, 143, 1144-1158.
-